

dissuade her from going up to the bed-room. She had said nothing.

When the doctor bent over the form of Mrs. Edey he saw at once that she was dead. He turned his attention to the husband, but almost at that minute Edey breathed his last. A bullet had gone through his brain.

When he saw that there was nothing for him to do, Dr. Baldwin notified Conner Moore at Bayshore by telephone. Then he took the little girl with him to his own home. The servants noticed Edey's brother, Frederick Edey of the firm of Huhn, Edey & Co., brokers, at No. 74 Broadway, at his home, No. 18 West Fifty-sixth street, this city.

The Edeys had been living together in their Belmont home in seeming unity since they returned on Nov. 15 from a long sea trip via Panama and the Pacific coast to San Francisco. Though they had withdrawn to some extent from the activities of local society, they appeared together in Edey's automobile constantly and there was nothing to indicate that they had not forgotten the causes of the early autumn gossip.

The gossip of the countryside attached itself first to the retired millionaire and his wife when Gardner Murdoch, the ivyman, said to a friend on Aug. 15: "George, I want you to come to my wedding on Aug. 15 of next year. I am going to get married then and my wife will get married, too."

SETTLEMENT OF $50,000 ON PAIR REPORTED.

Then he took the train for New York and Mrs. Edey was on the train with him. Instantly the story spread that Murdoch and Mrs. Edey were going to live together, obtain divorces and start their world apart. Then it was learned that Murdoch had been engaged to teach Mrs. Edey how to ride a spirited mount given to Henry Edey by his brother, Frederick, had been seen riding with her constantly and had been invited on boating and motoring parties with Edey and his wife.

The news traveled far and wide, the story that had all the South Singing in the east was the report that Edey had made a settlement of $50,000 upon Murdoch and his wife on the understanding that they should marry after they had secured divorces and that Mrs. Edey would wed Mr. Murdoch.

"Do I look like a fool?" was Edey's only comment when he heard the story.

Mr. Edey, who was keeping Liebenow before her marriage, went to the home of a married sister in West One hundred and Twenty-third street. There, it developed, Edey made many visits, trying to induce her to return to him. Murdoch, who several times visited Mrs. Edey in the course of her stay, said there was no hearing of Mr. Edey. Mrs. Edey had insisted upon his wife's departure from home in order that he might be free to love "the other woman."

"I know that 'other woman' is my wife," Murdoch said.

Murdoch told of a trip the Edeys and the Murdochs had made to Bimini at the behest of Edey. During that trip, the Belmont ivyman declared, Edey and Mrs. Murdoch were together constantly. Edey was with Mr. Murdoch much more frequently than in his own wife's company, he said.

MR. EDEY REFUSED TO CONFIRM MURDOCK'S STORY.

Mrs. Edey did not confirm Murdoch's statements and refused to be seen. Murdoch was reported to have sailed for Galveston aboard the steamship Concho on Aug. 7, but he was to New York on Oct. 15, he being ill.

His wife went to the home of her father, H. C. Corwin, postmaster of Belmont. Subsequently the Murdochs were reconciled, and they are now living together on Staten Island, where Murdoch is conducting a hotel.

Mrs. Murdoch has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Corwin, at Belmont, and Murdoch was a guest at the Corwin home last Saturday. It was said by Postmaster Corwin to-day that his son-in-law had returned to Staten Island Saturday night.

Katherine Liebenow was Henry C. Edey's second wife. His first wife was Miss Lettie Carlson of Boston, and when she died, a year after her marriage struck up an acquaintance with Katherine Liebenow, the pretty daughter of a village fisherman, just out of school.

After eight years of married life, Edey sought for a divorce, claiming Henry C. Edey was a drunkard, as co-conspirator. A detective in Edey's pay surprised Burr and pretty Mrs. Edey in a hotel in this city. Before the divorce proceedings were finished Edey began to lavish gifts upon the fisherman's daughter and they were married a year after the death of the first Mrs. Edey as obtained.

TRAGEDY RECALLS THE FATAL NOBLE-SUYDAM "TRIANGLE."

The tragic termination of the Edey marital difficulties recalls the famous Noble-Suydam-Burnett triangle, little more than a year ago by Mrs. Waller L. Suydam, Jr., of The Point, L. L. and her youthful admirer, Frederick W. Noble, the twenty-two-year-old son of a Brooklyn plumber. They committed suicide rather in their apartment at No. 42 West Twelfth street less than a month after they had tried to patch the breach.

The Suydams lived less than five miles away from the house where Edey stalked today. They were to all outward appearances well-mated and happy. Yesterday Mrs. Suydam left her husband's house and came to New York. She took up a residence at the Regis apartments, No. 52 West Twelfth street with young Noble, six years her junior, a man without employment and with no money. She had known him for seven years; he had been employed as a cook on her husband's yacht when he was fifteen.

Mrs. Suydam was frank, almost pugnacious, in voicing her views of her husband. "He is an animal," she said.

"After years of a life in which only those who have suffered as I have suffered know how to appreciate, I met a man who awoke within me that love which had lain dormant throughout the years. I knew the step I took to be wrong according to the conventions of society, but as I grew older, I had nothing and I owed nothing. I had deigned to public opinion and here I am, ready to accept what comes."

DIED TOGETHER LESS THAN A MONTH AFTER WEDDING.

Edey's attitude toward his wife was generous. He offered to receive her back in his home, forgive her. She refused to go. In September, 1911, he began suit for divorce in the Supreme Court, naming Noble as co-respondent. Neither Noble nor Mrs. Suydam entered a defense. On Jan. 9 of last year the divorce was made absolute. The sum paid to Mrs. Suydam became Miss Noble in Jersey City.

On Feb. 4 the newly wedded couple were found clasped in each other's arms on the floor of their kitchen, gas owing from the open oven. On the wall of their living room between photographs of themselves was a photograph of Walter L. Suydam, the husband who had died in a fatal experiment of marriage alterations.

Alexander Mercer Pell, related to prominent New York families and an erstwhile member of the most exclusive clubs, died to-day in the little furnished room at No. 382 Broadway that had sheltered him in his last obscure days.

At forty-two he had reached the bottom of the social toboggan and he left an estate of a threebare still or two, a few books and a rubber-handled pile of pawn tickets which indicated the most recent source of his income.

Shortly after Pell's marriage in the late nineties to Miss May Hutton, a Herkimer County belle, and herself of old Knickerbocker stock, he was able to settle on his wife an estate of a million dollars and yet retain a fortune. But to-day, when the Coroner went through his effects, two pennies were all he found there and the pawn tickets,

BROTHERS NOTIFIED, REFUSE TO MAKE A STATEMENT.

Mrs. Tayra Weinberg, from whom Pell rented his room, became anxious this morning when her roomer failed to show at the usual time for his mysterious business "downtown." Just what he did she never had known, but in some way she had got the impression he was a broker. At 10 o'clock she tried the door of his room, and it swung inward. Pell was lying in bed, dead. Mrs. Weinberg ran out in the street and brought back Policeman Holter, who looked at Pell and then notified the Coroner's office.

Mrs. Weinberg then called up H. Arnold Pell and Duncan Pell, the man's brothers. They hurried to the house with an undertaker. A burial permit was quickly obtained from the Coroner.

The brothers declined to make any statement, referring reporters to Alexander Pell's office, at No. 25 Nassau street. There Austin Finegan, in whose office Pell had desk room, could give little information.

Mr. PELL HAS BEEN HERE FOR A COUPLE OF MONTHS," he said. "He did some business as a bond broker, but he must have had some other source of income."

Then Mr. Finegan was told of the documents.

GROUND FOR WIFE'S DIVORCE KEPT SECRET.

Pell was divorced in 1907 after proceedings which raged in secrecy those in the W. K. Vanderbilt case. The hearing was held in the chambers of Dr. David Hunter McAlpin, No. 3 East Fifty-fourth street, and Marceline Hartley Dodge, No. 691 Fifth avenue. Both these residences are connected with that of Mr. Rockefeller—the McAlpin home by a bridge, the Dodge home by an opening through the walls,

Every door, window and coal hole is watched. Deputy sergeants-at-arms and private detectives are perched on roofs and fire escapes of the St. Regis Hotel and other buildings in the neighborhood overlooking the Rockefeller yard.

The Sergeant-at-Arms of the House, Charles F. Riddell, has communicated with Speaker Champ Clark, who issued the subpoenas on Oct. 23, 1912, and Chairman Hugo of the Committee on Banks and Commerce, stating that Mr. Rockefeller is wilfully avoiding service. Mr. Riddell, who had exaggerated because Mr. Rockefeller was eluded him for seventy days, and because no record of service was made, who was impeached last Monday night, is costing him $100 a day, waste the House to issue an arrest warrant, which would have the power of a warrant and enable the process server to enter his home and make a search for him to serve the subpoena.

Frederick Edey heard of the murder and suicide in his brother's home at his own home, No. 18 West Fifty-sixth street. He started immediately for Belmont.

MAY LET CASTRO ENTER COUNTRY TO REMAIN ONE HOUR

Government Considers His Request to Allow Him to Come in and Sail at Once.

Captain Castro's case has not been settled, despite the willingness of the former Venezuelan dictator to get out of the United States.

Secretary Nagel to-day began consideration of Castro's request to be permitted to sail Saturday on the steamer America for Germany. He came from France, so that presents a vexatious problem, with the possibility that should Germany bar him he would be returned to New York and finally to France.

Castro has raised another complication by wishing to leave without having the United States pass upon his admissibility.

Whether he will sail Saturday on the America probably depends upon whether the line will receive him as a passenger, with the possibility of being obliged to bring him back to Ellis Island.

Under the statutes regulating immigration, the steamship line which brings an "undesirable" to an American port is responsible for his departure. However, it was explained at the Department of Commerce and Labor to-day (Castro) were returned to France there would likely be some objection to his return there. In this case he would be returned to the "port of original embarkation," New York City, and the United States Government would again have for solution the problem of his disposal, solved in part this time by Castro's own decision not to stay in America.

Inasmuch as Castro has voluntarily agreed to depart, the Immigration officials have no authority to "see to it that he does," once he is released at Ellis Island. Ellis Island is "officially" not "American soil," so if Castro is released Saturday he will enter New York unescorted, but expected by the officials to go immediately to the dock board the America and leave the country. From the time he lands in New York City to the hour of sailing, he will be technically "admitted" to the United States.

With great ceremony Gen. Castro received reporters in the office of Superintendent Baker at Ellis Island to-day. One of them asked if he were planning to start a revolution in Venezuela with the help of Herman Bergendorf, who has asked for a writ of temporary manumission, and all other public school teachers similarly situated. Superintendent Schuyler Maxwell and the Corporation Counsel of New York City and the Corporation Counsel of Venezuela are opposing the issuance of the writ.

Some three thousand public school teachers would be affected, it was said, should the writ be granted, and it would add an additional $600 to the annual cost of the schools to the city as a result of the promotions and attendant increase in salary. Mr. O'Brien told the Contraband that a law passed in 1900 gives "Class A" teachers preference for promotions. Justice Kupper reserved decision.

ALDERMEN GIVE $1,000 FOR BRYANT WILLARD'S FAMILY.

Will Seek to Raise More by Benefit for Kin of Dead City Father, to Be Buried Friday.

A special meeting of the Board of Aldermen was called to-day to take official action following the sudden death of Alderman Bryant Willard, a popular member of the board. At the meeting the aldermen unanimously contributed nearly $1,000 for the family of Alderman Willard and arrangements also were made to have a benefit to swell the amount.

A committee of nine, comprising Alderman McCourt, Bolles, Hannan, Post, Devine, Delmer, Cole, Boschen and Stevenson, was appointed to attend the funeral services to-morrow night at the Cathedral, M. E. Church at One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street and Seventh avenue.

Aldermen McCourt and Boschen also were appointed a committee to draft a set of resolutions of condolence to be adopted by the board next Monday, engrossed copies of which will be sent to the bereaved family. For thirty days Bryant Willard's seat in the Aldermanic chamber will be draped in mourning.

TEACHERS APPEAL TO COURT TO ORDER THEIR PROMOTION

Primary grade teachers holding "Class II" certificates made a plea for promotion to graduate class teacher without further examination in the Brooklyn Branch of the Supreme Court to-day.

Attorney Denis R. O'Brien presented the arguments to Justice Kupper on behalf of Herman Bergendorf, who has asked for a writ of temporary manumission, and all other public school teachers similarly situated. Superintendent Schuyler Maxwell and the Corporation Counsel of New York City and the Corporation Counsel of Venezuela are opposing the issuance of the writ.
